Portrait Drawing Course

A course which focuses on drawing the head – developing a greater understanding of proportions and capturing character. You will learn about the architecture of the head, neck and facial features and how the underlying structure influences the surface form. By the end of the course you should be able to depict the head from different viewpoints using a selection of different materials and approaches. Suitable for beginners and those with some experience. You will draw from a clothed portrait model and work either sitting or standing at an easel.

CORE SKILLS:

Proportions of head and facial features.
Observing and drawing tilts and angles of the head.
Plasticine sculpture to understand the form of the head from multiple angles.
Discovering shapes and planes.
Experimenting with pen line inspired by the work of other artists.
Exploring different compositional strategies for a portrait.
